There aren't too many options to run a marathon in North Dakota. Fargo is my far the popular choice. I've always heard good things about this race. I decided to make this a quick trip. I flew in on Friday and flew home on Saturday evening. I flew into Fargo since airfare was reasonable.

I arrived on Friday afternoon and look part in their Friday Night 5k race. It was a fun 5k race.

On race day I parked in downtown Fargo and walked to the staging area in Moorhead, Minnesota. The race started on the bridge between Minnesota and North Dakota. I started off running well. Settled into a good pace that I was able to keep up.

The race was very well supported by the community. Every neighborhood the race ran through came out and really supported the runners.

The weather was great. Sunny and mild weather. It never felt like it got too warm.

I finished in 3:24:54 which earned me my 6th straight sub-3:30 marathon in 6 weeks. I was happy with the time.

I headed to the airport and flew home that afternoon/evening.
