When I saw the opportunity to double South Carolina and Georgia I jumped at the chance. I used my Alaska Airline miles to fly into ATL and drove to Greenville SC. I arrived late on Friday night, so I went straight to my motel.

Race morning it was quite cold. It was about 30 degrees and there was frost on the windows of my rental car. I didn't expect that is South Carolina. However the good news is that the cold weather went away when the sun came out.

I pushed myself early on and never slowed down. I pulled in a solid performance of 3:10:50 (my fifth fastest marathon). It was a great way to start off the double.

The race was very well organized and before I left town to head back to Atlanta, I checked out the huge rock waterfalls in the middle of town.
